The Curtain Theatre, Mill Valley's own company of players, is returning for a seventh season with William Shakespeare's A Midsummer Night's Dream, opening Aug. 26 in Old Mill Park.

The story line: Madcap actors rehearse after their day jobs to put on a play for the Duke. Young lovers flee, frolic and fight in the forest. Squabbling fairies foil them, casting spells of passion and ridiculousness. Who loves whom? Is it real or a dream? Hilarious? Sensual? Yes!

This dreamy production, directed by Susannah Rose Woods, features music composed and adapted by Don Clark and another enchanting set by Steve Coleman, in a natural amphitheater behind Mill Valley's library that is surrounded by towering redwoods and a creek.

The performances are at 2 p.m. on Saturdays, Sundays, and Labor Day Monday (Aug. 26, 27; Sept. 2,3,4,9,10)
